Thomas Group Announces the Creation of New Business Development and Strategy Position

IRVING, TEXAS, July 25, 2007 — Thomas Group, Inc. (NasdaqGM: TGIS), a leading operations and process improvement firm, today appointed Len Gillespie as head of New Business Development and Strategy. During Gillespie's 13 year tenure with Thomas Group, his responsibilities have included management of large, complex consulting engagements; development and expansion of new business; and also functioned as a Regional Manager for the company. Gillespie also served four years as Operations Leader for The Highland Group where he was responsible for closing and delivering consulting engagements for commercial clients representing revenues of over $10 million.

"Len will be critical to continuing our revenue growth through new product development and enhancement of our current product offerings. Len will head the team who will determine what new or additional services will be of greatest value to our customers and execute the strategy to bring those new or enhanced solutions to the market." Taylor continued, "We will also re-evaluate our target markets and our selling model. Our product offerings have always been industry agnostic and any new or enhanced methodologies we develop will be widely applicable to evolving process and culture challenges in both commercial and governmental enterprises."
