Thomas Group Appoints Harrison Goldman, Transportation Practice Leader

IRVING, TEXAS — October 20, 2009 — Thomas Group, Inc. (NasdaqGM: TGIS), a global consulting firm, announced today the appointment of Harrison Goldman, Transportation Practice Leader. Goldman has over 25 years of senior management experience, and is an expert in managing and implementing business process improvement (BPI) solutions. His most recent experience with Thomas Group includes overseeing the delivery of large implementation programs, including the creation and institutionalization of complete operational and financial solutions for clients.

Goldman has held multiple positions with the Thomas Group including Principal, Vice President, Results Manager and Resultant. During these roles, he has spent considerable time in the field on a number of assignments managing assessments, client transformation implementation programs for multiple companies. He has overseen the delivery of very complex and multi faceted large implementation programs, including the creation and institutionalization of complete operational and financial solutions for clients. Goldman is known for leading work that generates tangible impact in complex, sensitive stakeholder settings. Selected examples of his project experience include developing a business process improvement (BPI) operating model for a large government agency; optimizing manufacturing distribution services; and leading a number of multiyear change programs for large organizations, as well as engagements relating to strategy, business development, and growth.

"Harrison brings a unique combination of business and transportation experience to Thomas Group that will strengthen our competitiveness and positioning globally," said Earle Steinberg, CEO and president of Thomas Group. "We look forward to putting his proven track record of success as a strategist and team leader to work as we drive to the next level of growth."
